ACcording to the laſt Advices from Count Munich, which are of the 6th Inſtant, the Army under his Command was then arrived in the Neighbourhood of Samarka. As to the Forces under the Conduct of General Lacy, after the taking of Aſoph, that General ſent a Detachment of Dragoons commanded by Lieutenant General Douglas, to join Felt Marſhal Munich; and having left a ſufficient Number of Troops in that Fortreſs and other adjacent Towns; and made the proper Diſpoſitions for repairing the Fortifications, and doing whatever elſe was neceſſary, reſigned the Command in thoſe Parts to General Lewaſchaff, and marched himſelf with the Remainder of the Army along the Palus Meotis to Miuſſe, from whence he proceeded towards Iſum, and the neighbouring Countries, in order to take proper Meaſures for ſettling Winter Quarters, and at the ſame Time for covering the Frontiers of his Miſtreſs's Territories on that Side. The Army of her Czarish Majeſty in the Crimea, is ſaid to have purſued from time to time the Advantages it had obtained over the Tartars, with a Conduct worthy of the greateſt Praiſe. After having taken and ruined the famous Harbour of Korelow, and Baczſarai the chief Reſidence of the Cham, as alſo the Reſidence of Calga Sultan, called Achmezet, and obtained even in this laſt Place a conſiderable Victory over the Enemy, they returned by ſlow Marches to Perecop, and remained near that Place all the Month of July, in order to refreſh themſelves after their Fatigue, and to be the leſs affected with the great Heats uſual at that Seaſon in thoſe Parts. Theſe Meaſures ſeemed prudent and adviſeable to be taken at that Time, as no Attempts of Moment were apprehended to be made by the Enemy againſt the Ruſſian Army in their Return, who were accordingly not followed or attacked in it by any of the Tartars; and in the few Incurſions thoſe People afterwards made, they were repulſed with Loſs: And Count Munich having received Advice, after his Arrival at Perecop, that the Intention of the Turks was to aſſemble all their Forces and paſs the Dnieper, he reſolved to abandon the Crimea, in order to go and oppoſe the Enemy wherever they made the greateſt Preparations; and having blown up and eraſed the Caſtle of Perecop, and all the ſtrong Line, which were the only Bulwark of it, as alſo the Caſtle of Kinburn, he marched with the whole Army under his Command towards the Dnieper, to wait there for the Turks, and to give them an Opportunity of coming to an Engagement; but the Grand Signior's Army ſeeing the Ruſſian Forces appear near that River, entirely changed their Intention of paſſing it; wherefore Felt Marſhal Munich, after a ſhort time, finding it was not the Enemy's Intention to make any Motions, and conſidering that the proper Seaſon for keeping the Field was over, and that it would therefore have been uſeleſs for the Army under his Command to have remained there any longer, ordered them to proceed by ſlow Marches along the ſaid River, towards the Frontiers of Muſcovy, that they might, by the latter End of Autumn, have the Benefit of Winter Quarters, after a Campaign truly glorious, though fatiguing.

Vienna, Oct. 13, N. S. This Court hardly doubts of receiving ſpeedily the News of the entire Evacuation of the Empire, by the French, ſo that the Preliminaries will ſoon be fully executed with regard to France and Sardinia. The Evacuation of Tuſcany, and the Exhibition of proper Acts of Ceſſion of the Countries to be left to the Emperour, the Duke of Lorrain, and to Don Carlos, reſpectively, will depend upon the Court of Spain; and it is ſaid the Duke of Montemar is in daily Expectation of receiving the final Orders of his Court relating thereto.

Berlin, Oct. 20, N. S. We hear that M. Mardefeldt, the Pruſſian Miniſter at Peterſbourg, had, by Order of his Maſter, deſired the Czarina to interpoſe her good Offices with the King and Republick of Poland, that, whenſoever the States of Courland ſhould proceed to the Election of a Duke, purſuant to the Conſtitutions paſſed by the laſt Diet, Matters might be ſo managed, as that the Choice ſhould fall on Margrave Charles, late Margrave Albert's eldeſt Son. Count Teſſin, the Swediſh Miniſter to the Court of Vienna, arrived here a few Days ago on his Return to Stockholm.

Hague, Oct. 23, N. S. By the laſt Advices Count Golowkin, the Ruſſian Miniſter here, had from his Court, Felt Marſhal Munich was arrived with the Remains of his Army, near a River called Samarka, which is the Boundary of Muſcovy from the leſſer Tartary; and General Lacy was at Iſum, a Town within the Ruſſian Limits, and ſituate on the Donetz, where he had cantoned the Troops he had brought with him from Aſoph. The States General have granted his Imperial Majeſty Leave to raiſe in this Country three Millions and a half of Florins, by way of Loan, at five per Cent. upon the Revenues
